Our Town Catch Up!

Wow, we had a fantastic response to our recent competitions, with over 400 entries! It probably won't surprise you that the largest number of entries was for the Arsenal tickets, followed closely by the meal for two at Chillies.

A big thank you to Chillies, The Eatery, DJ Dan Entertainments for donating the prizes, and to Our Town c/o Glen Ashley for the Arsenal tickets. Unfortunately, we had a change of plans as DJ Dan Entertainments had to cancel his event, but he generously provided vouchers to ensure that no one was disappointed.

Currently, we are running competitions for Caption Corner and a Children's Photo competition. To give you more time, we are extending the deadlines for these entries. Additionally, this month we have calendars to give away and a meal for two at the Whalebone plus three Christmas hampers!

Full details can be found on page 14 & 15. Just click on the QR code to enter the competition.

One of our recent winners shared some lovely feedback:

"Thank you so much for my Savers vouchers. It was an unexpected win after my entry into your recent competition. I'm not normally so lucky. I love this magazine and find it really keeps me in touch with what's happening locally. Thank you once again."

I always say, "You have to be in it to win it!" It only takes a few seconds to enter, and you could be a winner! This will be our last magazine before Christmas, so I just want to wish everyone a wonderful festive holiday. We will resume in January 2026.

Best wishes,
The Our Town Team

Local Boxers Bring home the GOLD for Billericay and Wickford Amateur Boxing Club

Two National Champions in one day!

This month, the Billericay and Wickford Amateur Boxing Club proudly celebrated two additional National Champions, bringing their remarkable total to 21 National Champions since Les Cooke reformed the Club in 2009!

Last week, George Liddard, a former Billericay and

Champions, Abbie & Fionn

Wickford Schoolboy 3 Nations Champion and the youngest boxer ever to represent the Club, was crowned the youngest British and Commonwealth Professional Middleweight Champion.

Congratulations are also in order for Abbie, Fionn, Caleb, and most recently, Kieran. Abbie has become their 20th National Champion, while Fionn is the 21st. Notably, Abbie is the daughter of Richard Underhill and Jo Courtney, who run Repair it Smart in Rettendon.

Richard Underhill expressed his pride: "Wow, my daughter! I'm so proud, and she's an inspiration for all girls out there who want to take up the sport. Dreams do come true, and my daughter is testament to that—this is not just a boy's sport!"

The Club extends heartfelt thanks to all the grassroots amateur boxing coaches who volunteer their time to help the kids reach their potential. They also appreciate the unwavering support from parents, friends, and volunteers at their gym.

Special recognition goes to Kieran and Caleb, who faced some very close decisions—they are among the hardest training boxers in the gym, and their time will come again. Congratulations to everyone involved, and always remember the roots of your training and where you started.

The Billericay and Wickford Amateur Boxing Club is affiliated with England Boxing. All their coaches and volunteers are trained, qualified, and fully DBS checked. They train both adults and children.

Join them at the Main Event Boxing Gym, 7 Heron Avenue, Wickford, Essex SS11 8DL.

Dr John's Diaries - History of South Woodham Ferrers

Dr John Cormack presents prime time health issues. Detailing the problems we encountered whilst trying to provide a half-way decent service to our patients makes it sound as if daily life was all doom and gloom. Fortunately the 'day job' was full of interesting challenges – and there were always patients who brightened our day. Here's one example ...

Doctors are supposed to make their patients feel better – but there are some patients who do the cheering up for us – you see their name on the morning surgery list and your heart skips a beat. Bridget Noctor was in her eighties but her eyes sparkled and her voice was pure nectar. I was so taken with her that I asked if I could record her.

We talked about the fact that, whilst we might bemoan the present state of the NHS, there were ways in which it was a whole lot better than healthcare in 'the bad old days' ... particularly, in rural Ireland if you were unlucky enough to have a GP who was an alcoholic. Watch this and you'll see what I mean.

In my spare time I amused myself by looking out for interesting local health stories. One such can be found on page 21 of 'The Essex Family Historian'. "People born in Maldon between approx 1860 and 1945 were often subject to having brown discoloured teeth that were resistant to decay. This was eventually discovered to be caused by an excess of Fluoride in the water, peculiar to Maldon.

Prior to the mid 1800's water was obtained from springs, such as the one that fed the Cromwell Pump, and also shallow wells. As the population increased, deep wells and boreholes were introduced, the two main sites being in Spital Road and Wantz Road.

These were dug and bored over 250 ft deep, through the London clay which was 170 feet thick, into the chalk below. Between the clay and the chalk were the Thanet sands which were peculiar to this part of Essex, centred on Maldon, and contained high Fluoride levels in excess of 5.0 milligrams/litre. They extended under the Southend area and up to Mountnessing, but with lower levels of Fluoride, between 2 and 3 mg/l."

Today, the level is much lower and falls below the UK's legal limit of 1.5 mg/L, thanks to a mix of natural sources and water treatment processes. This is sufficient to significantly decrease the incidence of tooth decay (which is the main cause of hospital admissions for children aged 5 to 9 in the UK) without causing tooth discoloration. Even so there is still a certain amount of controversy about fluoride – as mentioned in a video featuring 'Dr Idz'.

As for the goings on in SWF, there was a time limit on how long the PCT's surgery could be run from portakabins so, as previously mentioned, the 'New Surgery' moved to the ground floor of the McCarthy & Stone building. The costly portakabins were eventually removed – and my grainy video diary records this in an excruciating slowly moving segment. One minute of it will give you the gist – but those whose hobby is watching paint dry (and those searching for a cure for intractable insomnia) might want to battle through to the end.

If this profligate waste of NHS funds (which come out of your pockets) was all there was to it we could just shrug our shoulders as this sort of thing is commonplace. We've all watched anxiously as HS2 costs have spiraled and we're familiar with organisations that highlight examples of waste – such as DOGE UK and the TaxPayers' Alliance. But this was not a 'victimless crime' – it had a tangible adverse effect. Every penny wasted was a penny less spent on patient care.

What can happen if your Will is difficult to understand?

You may know exactly what you want to include in your Will when organising your affairs and putting your estate plans in place, but it is important to ensure your Will sounds right and makes sense.

As these are your final wishes, you want everything carried out as stated in your Will, which is why you need to check it's clear and concise.

What can happen if your Will is difficult to understand?

If your language is too ambiguous and vague, it can lead to your executors and beneficiaries struggling to understand exactly what you want.

It can confuse your family and friends, potentially affecting their ability to carry out the wishes you have laid out.

We know how much you care about your family, which is why your language cannot be complicated, as it can lead to your beneficiaries not receiving their intended inheritance if the language is too complex or contradicts itself.

The language you choose could force the hand of some of your beneficiaries who may challenge the content. The last thing you want to happen after you pass away is your lasting legacy being dragged through courts via dispute claims.

How should your Will sound?

Your Will should see your intentions laid out clearly and concisely.

Assets should be defined and assigned to the beneficiary of your choosing. Using simple and concise language will make the distribution process much simpler for your executors.

You may choose to include additional information about certain assets, such as cash sums or property. This should also be easy to understand, especially if you have included certain conditions about a particular asset.

Clear intentions laid out in your Will should make things much easier to understand and avoid the risks of potential disputes. Beneficiaries can invoke The Inheritance (Provision for Family and Dependents) Act 1975 if they feel they have been wronged when your executors distribute your estate.

However, you can include an in terrorem clause within your Will that states a beneficiary can lose their inheritance if they decide to contest the validity of your Will.

While not always legally binding, in terrorem clauses clarify what can happen and should help avoid unwanted legal cases and family disputes.

Whether it's leaving cash sums and property or digital assets and family photos from days out across the Essex coastline, the language you use has to be consistent throughout your Will to ensure your final wishes are respected and carried out.

How can you be sure your Will outlines your intentions?

The simplest way to ensure your Will is concise and outlines exactly what you want is to speak with legal experts.

The Palmers Law team is here to help you look at your Will and check that it is laid out how you want it to be. If it's not, we can advise, support and help you update or create a new Will that does reflect your wishes.

We know how much your family and friends mean to you and they will not want extra pressures on top of mourning your loss.

The simpler your Will is, the easier it will be for your executors to distribute your estate. If you want to look over your Will, get in touch with our expert team.
